

Playlist: Presentations Industry Training

Between crisis rhetoric and workplace realities: Stephen Black - Part 1

Stephen Black, senior researcher at the Centre for Research in Learning and Change, University of Technology, Sydney begins with an outline of the familiar 'crisis' discourse on the role of literacy and numeracy in workplaces. Such a discourse, however, represents only some voices, the dominant voices of industry and employer groups. Other voices are absent -- those of the workers. This presentation suggests that there is a contradiction between the dominant crisis rhetoric and the realities of literacy and numeracy

Between crisis rhetoric and workplace realities: Stephen Black - Part 2

Stephen Black, senior researcher at the Centre for Research in Learning and Change, University of Technology, Sydney begins with an outline of the familiar 'crisis' discourse on the role of literacy and numeracy in workplaces. Such a discourse, however, represents only some voices, the dominant voices of industry and employer groups. Other voices are absent -- those of the workers. This presentation suggests that there is a contradiction between the dominant crisis rhetoric and the realities of literacy and numeracy

Between crisis rhetoric and workplace realities: Stephen Black - Part 3

Stephen Black, senior researcher at the Centre for Research in Learning and Change, University of Technology, Sydney begins with an outline of the familiar 'crisis' discourse on the role of literacy and numeracy in workplaces. Such a discourse, however, represents only some voices, the dominant voices of industry and employer groups. Other voices are absent -- those of the workers. This presentation suggests that there is a contradiction between the dominant crisis rhetoric and the realities of literacy and numeracy

Between crisis rhetoric and workplace realities: Stephen Black - Part 4

Stephen Black, senior researcher at the Centre for Research in Learning and Change, University of Technology, Sydney begins with an outline of the familiar 'crisis' discourse on the role of literacy and numeracy in workplaces. Such a discourse, however, represents only some voices, the dominant voices of industry and employer groups. Other voices are absent -- those of the workers. This presentation suggests that there is a contradiction between the dominant crisis rhetoric and the realities of literacy and numeracy

Between crisis rhetoric and workplace realities: Stephen Black - Part 5

Stephen Black, senior researcher at the Centre for Research in Learning and Change, University of Technology, Sydney begins with an outline of the familiar 'crisis' discourse on the role of literacy and numeracy in workplaces. Such a discourse, however, represents only some voices, the dominant voices of industry and employer groups. Other voices are absent -- those of the workers. This presentation suggests that there is a contradiction between the dominant crisis rhetoric and the realities of literacy and numeracy

ITO Assessment Tool webinar workshops summary and next steps

(blank)

Non-sense to Cognizance: Virginia Sanders - Part 1

Joinery ITO. In this presentation Virginia outlines some interesting statistics and the development of practical and relevant resources. Her presentation has been split into 2 short clips. To see other related

Non-sense to Cognizance: Virginia Sanders - Part 2

Joinery ITO. In this presentation Virginia outlines some interesting statistics and the development of practical and relevant resources. Her presentation has been split into 2 short clips. To see other related

Numeracy in the Workplace: Diana Coben - Part 1

Professor Diana Coben, Director of the National Centre of Literacy and Numeracy for Adults, discusses research related to numeracy in the workplace. Diana has researched, undertaken consultancy, taught and published internationally in the fields of: adult numeracy education; the politics of adult education from an international comparative perspective; and the professional development of adult educators. Most recently her research has focussed on numeracy for nursing. Diana is passionately committed to bringing

Numeracy in the Workplace: Diana Coben - Part 2

Professor Diana Coben, Director of the National Centre of Literacy and Numeracy for Adults, discusses research related to numeracy in the workplace. Diana has researched, undertaken consultancy, taught and published internationally in the fields of: adult numeracy education; the politics of adult education from an international comparative perspective; and the professional development of adult educators. Most recently her research has focussed on numeracy for nursing. Diana is passionately commitment to bringing

Numeracy in the Workplace: Diana Coben - Part 3

Professor Diana Coben, Director of the National Centre of Literacy and Numeracy for Adults, discusses research related to numeracy in the workplace. Diana has researched, undertaken consultancy, taught and published internationally in the fields of: adult numeracy education; the politics of adult education from an international comparative perspective; and the professional development of adult educators. Most recently her research has focussed on numeracy for nursing. Diana is passionately commitment to bringing

Numeracy in the Workplace: Diana Coben - Part 4

Professor Diana Coben, Director of the National Centre of Literacy and Numeracy for Adults, discusses research related to numeracy in the workplace. Diana has researched, undertaken consultancy, taught and published internationally in the fields of: adult numeracy education; the politics of adult education from an international comparative perspective; and the professional development of adult educators. Most recently her research has focussed on numeracy for nursing. Diana is passionately commitment to bringing